Standard Due Dates for Competing Applications
Check the funding opportunity announcement (FOA) for due date information. If the FOA says “standard due dates apply”, refer to the table at: http://grants.nih.gov/grants/submissionschedule.htm.

All applications must be submitted in response to a FOA. Use Parent Announcements for “unsolicited” or “investigator-initiated” applications.

NIH RSS Feeds http://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/rss_info.htm
If you are looking for the very latest funding opportunities published in the “NIH Guide for Grants and Contracts”, you can now get them in RSS format as well. You will find the very latest RFAs, Pas and Notices to be published each week. This list is “up to the minute”, so you know you will always be up to date. This RSS feed contains the same information found at http://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/WeeklyIndex.cfm.
This listserv is used to disseminate timely information such as limited submission competitions, updates to sponsor applications, rate changes, and training opportunities. Faculty and research staffs are strongly encouraged to subscribe to this listserv.

Limited Submissions Competitions

Some sponsors limit the number of nominations or proposals that Cornell (including Weill Medical College) may submit to a particular program. These special limited submission competitions are coordinated by the Office of the Vice Provost for Research and are announced via the CU-RES-ADMIN-L listserv. The Faculty Senate's Local Advisory Council reviews the nominations/proposals received and then select the submissions to go forward based on how closely the proposed research matches the sponsor's interests and thus has the best opportunity for success.

Sponsor deadlines occur throughout the year and typically do not have the same deadline annually; in addition, some invitations are not issued every year. Therefore, the deadline date for submitting materials to the internal review process is not included on the list that Cornell provides online. This is by no means an exhaustive list: investigators considering applying to a limited submission program that is not listed should contact Elaine LaRocque.
